But at the least, does it not affirm the solemnity of love? Will men and women ever stop reading love tales; will he or she who may be at any time the victim of despotic, of mystic natural forces--will he or she refuse the study of the strongest emotions we have? Hardly. And what has civilization done for man, after balking his prowess and dwarfing his breed? It has left him to the snares of self-destruction. Yet, if he escape them, he may outlast the film which nature put on his eyeballs, and may see clearly once more. It is the very persistence of love! For were a proud man's idol married, as Mary was, he could only worship her from afar, even if the chicken's lid still lay on his eye. But that...
